OLD AND NEW-An ancient shipbuilding principle is put to use for an innovation in off-shore oil drilling. This twin-hulled ship of steel is the modern counterpart of the catamaran which Pacific islanders have been fashioning for centuries from wood and vine. The recently christened ship, now probing for oil in the gulf of Mexico, is exceptionally stable and capable of drilling to depths more than four miles beneath the ocean floor. The flat top serves as a helicopter landing area and platform for a drilling derrick which jackknifes to the deck when the ship is under way.

An Intern's Lament . . . .

In less than three weeks, beginning October 13, enforcement officers will be authorized by state law to give chemical tests to motor vehicle operators whose behavior indicates they are driving while intoxicated.

While the new chemical test law will be rigorous in its application to drunken drivers, it will also exonerate those who have alcoholic concentration in the blood insufficient to consider them intoxicated.

Enforcement of this law in Missouri may have some slight effect of lessening the number of Americans who will die at the hands of drunk drivers in 1965. The estimate calls for 24,000 such deaths.

Coincident with this morbid prediction comes a note from Dr. J. W. Boger enclosing a clipping of an article from the Journal of the American Medical Association. Written by Dr. A. L. Lieber it is in the category of required reading:

PowerStruggle Engages Kremlin

(Editor's Note: Drew Pearson is on a news-gathering tour of Africa. In his absence the column is written by his associate, Jack Anderson.)

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON-Behind the pastel walls of the Kremlin, a struggle for power is still raging. It is reported to be more sophisticated, less savage than the power plays of the past. Yet upon its outcome may hang he answer to the momentous question of peace or war

Not even the most reliable intelligence reports can be depended upon to reveal exactly what is going on inside the Kremlin. But from whispers that have leaked out, a picture is taking form. Here are the outlines

1. Ex-Premier Nikita Khrushchev's disciples in the lower levels of government are being slapped down. They are not being banished to Siberia, as of old, but merely demoted. However, Khrushchev's enemies apparently lack the strength to purge his former followers inside the Kremlin.

2. The anti-American faction, led by the forbidding Mikhail Suslov, appears to have gained the upper hand. It has succeeded in intensifying the cold war and stepping up defense production. Those who favor peaceful coexistence, however, have managed to keep East-West channels open. They have also wangled some concessions for the Soviet consumers. Jekyll and Hyde

The rivalry between the Kremlin factions has given Soviet pronouncements a Jekyll-Hyde cast. Several key government posts also remain vacant because of the inability of either faction to triumph.

Of course, the hard-liners are led by Suslov, who has a deep suspicion of all things western. He favors a more rigid domestic discipline and more militant foreign policy. He has never given up the idea of Communist conquest of the world.

He is opposed down the line by pragmatic Premier Alexei Kosygin, who favors more practical policies. Straddling the Kremlin fence is party chairman Leonid Brezhnev, who reportedly sided with Suslov for more defense spending but went along with Kosygin for continued East-West talks.

The division in the Kremlin may continue indefinitely or may end in another sudden shake-up. Suslov already has brought former Premier Georgi Malenkov power struggle. LBJ's Urgent Message

Despite a kidney ailment and talk of retirement, Florida's lean and lithe Sen. George Smathers, the third man in the Senate Democratic leadership, is quietly preparing to run again in 1968

He has been encouraged by a secret poll which places him far out in front of his nearest rival. At the same time, two possible challengers have taken themselves out

One is LeRoy Collins, former Florida governor, whose confirmation to be under secretary of commerce was held up until he gave his word that he would not run against Smathers

The senator privately asked Senate Commerce Chairman Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., to delay the confirmation. After Collins had sweated awhile, Smathers sounded him out about his political plans.

Taking the hint, Collins quickly gave his assurance that he would not challenge Smathers for the Senate. Satisfied, Smathers told Magnuson to go ahead with Collins' confirmation.

The other potential rival, Miami Beach's Mayor Elliott Roosevelt, who has already won a statewide race for Democratic national committeeman, has promised to support Smathers in 1968.

In a confidential letter to the senator, Roosevelt wrote: "If your plans are formulated for re-election in 1968, I would like to go on record as one who is anxious to offer his services in any or all of your future campaigns.

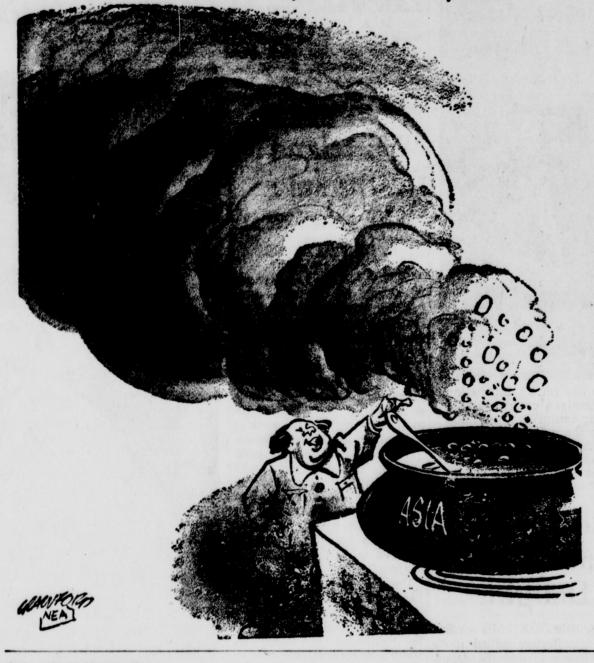

"I would be willing to assist in the headquarters operation and would also be available to speak actively on your behalf throughout the entire state.

The latest Florida poll, conducted by the First Research Corporation for Gov. Haydon Burns, shows Smathers leading all contenders in popularity.

"Senator Smathers is rated as 'excellent' or 'good' by 54.7 per cent of all persons in Florida," declares the confidential survey. Nowhere in the state does his rating fall below 50 per cent.'

Those polled were also asked which state official they thought was doing the most for Florida. Smathers was rated highest with 22 per cent, Burns second with 18.7 per cent, and Sen. Spessard Holland third with 7.7 per cent.

Social Revolution Taken For Granted

By JAMES MARLOW AP News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) - Anyone born in the past 25 years probably takes the American social revolution for granted. He grew up with it and in his lifetime it was always there and always, although slowly, going

Yet, what has happened just this year in Washington would have been unthinkable, before the revolution began, when the country was drowned in a depression

President Herbert Hoover will probably always be a symbol of the moment in history when the old attitudes came up against the new necessities of American life, and the old melted away.

Hoover did more than any president up to that time to use government resources to fight economic disaster, but couldn't shake off the philosophy of the era in which he grew up and all the eras before

He couldn't reconcile himself to the thought that the government should provide direct relief for the unemployed.

President Grover Cleveland in 1887 had expressed the philosophy that was prevalent through most of American history

"I do not believe that the power and duty of the federal government ought to be expended to the relief of individual suffering which is in no manner properly related to the public service or benefit.

The lesson should be constantly enforced that, though the people support the government, the government should not support the people."

The new era began in earnest in 1935 with the passage of the Social Security Act, which was the foot in the door for all that followed, and the Labor Relations Act compelling employers to bargain with unions of their employes

The last big measure of the New Deal came in 1938 with the law that created the 40-hour week, overtime for hours worked over 40, and a minimum wage, small as it was.

Those measures of President Franklin D. Roosevelt were approved and expanded and new dimensions of government responsibility for the general welfare were added under Presidents Harry S. Truman, Dwight D. Eisenhower, and John F. Kennedy.

But the steps taken this year under President Johnson and a heavily Democratic Congress show how far the nation has gone down the road of federal responsibility in many fields.

Congress will pass a measure providing college scholarships for needy students, the first time in history, and this year Congress has already approved a $1.3-billion school aid bill, the broadest ever for grade and high schools.

It is keyed to a goal of improving education in povertystricken areas but also includes indirect benefits for private and parochial school students.

Congress also passed a fouryear, $7.5-billion omnibus housing bill that continues urban renewal and slum clearance, expansion of low-rent housing, and a new program of federal rent subsidies for people who cannot afford standard private housing.

Congress not only broadened health and welfare programs but for the first time provided for medical care for people 65 and older through Social Securi-

And the new civil rights law lets the government move into the states to protect citizens' voting rights in a way never attempted before, such as tearing up voting tests under certain conditions.

These are only part of the flood of measures which have poured through this Congress in such quantity and speed and with such little fuss that the general public has almost taken them as routine. It's an accepted way of life now.

If anyone doubts it, all he has to do is remember the 1964 elec#### tion and what happened to the conservative Barry Goldwater and the conservative Republican party in general.

At the same time more and more power is being centralized Washington, less in the states. This is a matter of concern to many. But they can't have it both ways. Government help means government responsibility and control.

L. L. STUDER (Mayor of Sedalia)-I am in complete agreement with the comments of Mr. Frank Kerswell in his letter to the editor published in the Sedalia Democrat in reply to an editorial commending the school boy patrols.

There are school boy patrols now being used at six different locations in Sedalia and none of them are used at locations where there is highway traffic. They have provided such efficient service that there has not been any accidents at these school locations.

They have devoted their time and efforts unselfishly, without any compensation therefor on the jobs that they have done so very well. For this they deserve the commendation of a grateful community.

The Automobile Club of Missouri has recognized the unselfish and faithful service that they have rendered to the Sedalia schools and one of the boys from Sedalia has been awarded a paid all expense trip to Washington, D.C., each year.

You hit the nail right on the head when you said they are a credit to their families, their schools and the City of Sedalia. Indeed they are.

It is now being advocated by some of our citizens that the boys should be replaced with adult crossing guards. If they are, then it will cost the taxpayers of Sedalia $4,050 annual-

Water In Southwest Nearly As Precious As Black Gold

West of the 100th meridian, just about divides the which United States in half, water in places is sometimes as precious There is a seemingly perpetual feud among the states, especially in the Colorado River Basin, over water allocations. The quality of the water being delivered across the border at Yuma has troubled U.S. relations with Mexico.

In brief, the West has water Queen of Clubs problems generally unknown in the East except at times of severe drought. They can best be summarized as:

1. A scarcity of surface waters which has resulted in extensive mining of ground

2. The pollution of surface waters, chiefly through the use and reuse of water for irriga-

One of the solutions to the problem of scarcity has been the building of dams and more dams to trap the available surface waters, but even this practice has a point of no return.

For example, the U.S. Geological Survey notes that to increase the storage capacity on the main stream of the Colorado River from 30 million acre feet to the planned 66 million acre feet "will result in only a small net increase in water supply as evaporation will increase by nearly as much as the increase in water supply.

The Pacific Southwest is a prime example of man's stubbornness, of his determination to live and prosper in what is essentially a hostile climate.

The Salt River Valley in which Phoenix is located is a case in point. There are now close to a million people in the valley. Two-thirds of the water comes from 2,500 wells, the rest from the Salt River, fed by rains in the hills to the north. Technically, the Salt River Valley is desert country.

In making the desert flower hereabouts, however, water accumulated over thousands of years is being mined from underground reservoirs, called aquifers, by geologists. H. R. Skibitzke, head of the U.S. Geological Survey office here, said in an interview that the valley uses three million acre feet of water annuallyand only one million, approximately comes from surface waters. Further, Skibitzke said, the waters in the underground reservoirs are not being replaced naturally. Skibitzke said the waters available in the valley could probably support about four million people indefinitely-if agriculture was abandoned. What is going on in the Salt River Valley is being repeated in varying degree throughout the high plains which stretch from the sand hills of Nebraska well into Texas. In the plains section of Texas, ground water is being pumped at the rate of five million acre feet a year, while the natural recharge of the aquifer is about 50,000 to 75,000 acre feet. When water is applied to soil through irrigation, it leaves be- ners.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has voted to discard the national origins quota system of immigration and to substitute a policy of accepting immigrants regardless of their place of birth.

But unlike the House, the Senate in passing the immigration bill by a 76-18 vote Wednesday put a ceiling for the first time on immigration from Wastern Hemisphere nations.

It now will be up to a Senate-House Conference Committee to work out this key difference in the bills.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., floor manager of the measure in the Senate, told newsmen it might be possible to reach a compromise that would permit the President to raise the Western Hemisphere ceiling if he found this vital to the national interest.

The scrapping of the national origins quota system has long been sought by those who contend it discriminates in favor of northern and western Europeans and makes an immigrant's place of birth more important than what he may contribute to the United States.

Under the system, adopted in 1924, immigration quotas are assigned to nations outside the Western Hemisphere on the basis of the national origins of the U.S. population in 1920.

Supporters of the system maintained it was in the nation al interest to favor immigrants who, because of their cultural backgrounds, could be assimilated most easily. England, Germany and Ireland have by far the largest shares of the present annual quota of 158,561.

In place of this system, the bill provides for accepting immigrants on a first-come, firstserved basis regardless of place tired of walking the same old hopper danced the summer of birth except that preference rut? would be given to those with close family ties to U.S. citizens from it all, and start all over came the shivering grasshopper or with special skills.

Picking up the idea of fortified villages from South Viet Nam's ousted Diem regime, the Viet Cong is turning hamlets in areas under its control into small fortresses to block advances of U.S. and Vietnamese government forces. These photos from Communist sources show, right, peasants digging a trench in central South Viet Nam and, below, booby traps in a village street. Warning markers remain over the stake-lined pits while the Viet Cong controls the "fighting hamlet." The markers are removed when anti-Communist forces approach.

Schoolboy Patrols Effective

The local spotlight the past week illuminated the subject of traffic patrols at school crossings.

First open discussion occurred during city council meeting when school patrons requested adult supervisors at elementary schools not located adjacent to main highways. At the latter places adults are assigned to this duty. There are six of them paid by the city.

Following repeated comments on this subject we have been asked if a tangent to these discussions was an effort to downgrade the school boy

Certainly not. Such a suggestion sounds like someone is trying to do a little nit-picking.

From our personal observation and from reports of school officials the school boy patrols functioning at our local schools have been doing a stellar job at every station assigned them.

West Third street carries more traffic than other streets on which some schools are located, and motorists can't help but be downright proud of the way the patrol boys operate in front of Sacred Heart school. We don't believe adults could do much better as crossing guards there. These boys act like they mean business and we hope the teachers encourage them to continue their authoritative assignments in a dignified but positive manner.

The same commendation goes for those we have observed on duty at the other schools. The discipline involved here among the youngsters car't help but be communicated to motor vehicle operators who up to now have been responding courteously to formal stop signals.

Youngsters chosen for school patrol duty can never be underrated if they continue the performance they have shown in the past and are presently demonstrating. They should continue to justify their acceptance of the responsibility undertaken in the interests of their classmates' safety.

May we solicit school officials and patrons to persistently encourage school boy patrols and give them the support and recognition they deserve.

Downgrade the school boy patrols? Not while they respond to duty as they have been doing.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: Probing the Deep. - Man is ever in quest of new frontiers. With jungles, deserts, and polar regions, skies and mountain peaks behind them, men are soaring into outer space and plunging to the inmost depths of the oceans.

"Astronaut" may still be a more familiar term than "aquanaut," but exploration of the underwater frontier is about to move into high gear. It is astronaut M. Scott Carpenter who provides the present link. He is about to join Navy divers where he will live in Sealab II, 215 feet beneath the Pacific for thirty days. His "very intensive training in working in a hostile environment" prompted his choice for this as-

About three-quarters of the earth's surface is under water. In the depths lies a vast region little explored by man. Natural curiosity, technical progress, economic factors, and strategic considerations have combined to ensure the exploration and development of this realm of enchantment. The moon and Mars may be largely barren wastes, but the seas are filled with life and color.

Who that has seen the film of the underwater explorations of the team headed by Jacques-Yves Cousteau would not wish to join, at least, the first tourist cruise through the fascinating labyrinths he reveals? For the underwater pioneer there is promise of adventures unlimited.

As underwater domains become increasingly important to national interest, we wonder whether there will be a great rush to claim them, colonize them, fortify them, and carve them up among existing nation Looking Backward

Joint Chiefs Want To Censor Viet News

(Editors Note: Drew Pearson is on a news-gathering tour of Africa. In his absence the column will be written by his associate, Jack Anderson).

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON - The joint chiefs of staff are quietly pressing for authority to impose military censorship on all news dispatches coming out of South Viet Nam.

They contend that censorship is needed to stop the leak of military information, and they can make a good case for tightening security as long as American boys are dying in Viet Nam.

But they would also like to stop the bad publicity that has come from the wide open coverage of some military operations. They are disturbed over stories and pictures about South Vietnamese soldiers mistreating prisoners and American Marines burning villages.

The generals argue, with some justification, that the Viet Cong horrors are hidden from the world. Only news that has been processed through the communist propaganda mill is released

In contrast, correspondents are free to report almost anything they see on the American side, deterred only by a few voluntary restrictions.

The occasional brutalities and cruelties are flashed to the world by our own news

Indeed, the communists have been known to pick up American news pictures and use them for anti-American propaganda. This gives the kind of comfort to the enemy that the joint chiefs would like to stop.

LBJ's Travel Plans

Despite persistent reports that President Johnson will go abroad after Congress closes, he has decided against it. Instead, he will send high-ranking Americans to every one of the 114 United Nations

He hopes Secretary of State Dean Rusk will be free to make several trips. Other members will also be issued travel orders. Stein Research Center

Vital research in radiology, which may unravel the mysteries of malformations and perhaps unlock the secret of life itself, has been undertaken by Dr. Philip J. Hodes at the new Stein Research Center at Philadelphia's Jefferson Medical College.

The Center, named in honor of Bessie and Louis Stein, will be dedicated Monday morning. Big-hearted Lou Stein, president of the Food Fair Supermarket chain, raised the money for the project and suggested it be named after some distinguished

He proposed a few names, which the college turned down. Finally, over his protest, the college selected him as the distinguished American whose name should be given to the research center.

Pilot Seeks LBJ

Waiting in a cheap YMCA room a block from the White House for a chance to see President Johnson is a Polish-born World War II fighter ace who fought for Uncle Sam on the cuff and claims the $4,000 in back salary belatedly paid him last year wasn't enough.

To dramatize his grievance, Witold Lanowski has crossed the Atlantic to present his bill personally to President Johnson and to hand back his United States medals to the government that he believes has shortchanged him.

The husky veteran flew more than 60 missions and shot down four German planes for the U. S. Air Force. Yet he received not a cent of pay for his heroism until Congress finally got around to voting him $4,000 in back pay last year.

Lanowski calculated that he had $11,344 coming to him in overdue salary and subsistence, plus another $10,000 for "damages." Now a British citizen, he asked his government to intercede for him. The British foreign office made informal approaches to the U. S. Embassy to no avail.

Hard-pressed to make a living for his family. Lanowski began saving money for a trip to Washington to present his claim in person. He is now waiting for an appointment.

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

Early Treatment To Correct Crossbite

By William Lawrence, D.D.S. Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Rod first visited a dentist when he was 4 years old. He was an alert, healthy, solid little fellow, built like a miniature football player. In fact, his grandfather nicknamed him Pudge after that Yale football immortal. William Walter (Pudge) Heffel finger, "the greatest guard that ever lived."

Little Pudge had an engaging smile, highlighting an excellent set of teeth. But when he closed his mouth, his jaw stuck out to one side. He could have done this from habit - many people stick out their jaws in anger, compromises which establish or when thinking out a problem, Pudge couldn't bite any other tive arrangement of teeth and way. He couldn't get his lower jaw into normal balance with

Pudge had what dentists call "crossbite." This condition is marked by mid-line imbalance: centers of upper and lower teeth do not match, the lower jaw biting to one side. Lower teeth interlock in an eccentric pattern with upper teeth

Extent of malposition of teeth and crookedness of jaws varies from a millimeter to more than a centimeter. This depends, as does success in treatment, on cause, developmental factors, and time of treatment.

There are theories, once widely held, that crossbite resulted from injuries at birth or adverse prenatal position of the baby. Recent thinking places blame on inherited characteristics, environmental factors, or both in combination. Pressure caused by habits, like sleeping with hand under chin; finger or hand sucking, produces and exaggerates crossbite.

Sometimes crossbite becomes exaggerated and more pronounced by abnormal development resulting in a lower jaw what was going on. - H. L.

that becomes overdeveloped, overpowering the upper jaw, and preventing its normal growth. This also makes orthodontic correction more difficult, compounding problems of teeth straightening.

Orthodontists report a large percentage of success in treatment of crossbite cases, particularly if treatment is begun early enough, even though successful treatment often means a compromise solution. But after all, the "ideal solutions" that orthodontists constantly seek are the most convenient, comfortjaws, within the natural potential of the patient.

Democrat Pick-ups

It was the car wash sponsored by the sororities recently held as a money-making project, and since the girls are in different chapters and there are many of them, they really don't know some of those in the other chapters.

With only so many chamoois the girls were taking turns using them, and doing fine.

Noting the time, one girl who had been working, had to leave. So she went over to another girl and handed her a wet chamois, which must have been quite a shock to a strange young woman who was simply going through town, had stopped at a service station for a few minutes and didn't know

French Poodles

French poodles are soft and wooly and cute, That they make nice pets no one will dispute, They are various colors and various sizes,

They are friendly and quick and full of surprises, They like things in order, they do not like change, When something is moved the whole house seems strange

And they let you know without any doubt, By barking and wiggling and jumping about, That a chair's out of place or a table or stool And that is against a French poodle's rule-

They want things to remain exactly the same In the house that is home as the day that they came, They are even particular about couch or chair Where you usually sit-they want you right there,

If you take another they know you are wrong And insist that you sit where you really belong: They always love company and they let you know, They yip and they dance and put on a show,

They stand on their hind feet and jump up and down-A little French poodle is truly a clown, They are easy to teach for they understand And are quick to obey their master's command, They have natural curls-are a little bit vain-They are glad they look fancy instead of so plain,

Sometimes their haircuts will make people smile, But a French poodle likes it 'cause he thinks he's in style, They like to be washed-and even perfumed,

They don't mind being combed for they must be well groomed, They like attention and on your lap sit, That they're a bit spoiled all will admit, They love certain toys and sometimes they chew A rug or a pillow, a sock or a shoe;

Whenever an owner starts talking about

Antics of his poodle he never runs out For a French poodle owner is just in his glory Whenever he's telling a French poodle story-Folks without a French poodle don't know what they're missin' But if everyone had one-pray tell me-who'd listen? Hazel N. Lang

We do believe in sacrifice bidding or flag flying as it is sometimes called in rubber bridge. Such bids incur two hazards. The first is that you may be taking a phantom save and find out as the other side chalks up several hundred points that you would have made a profit by passing and setting them. The second is that the penaltyy will be too much.

Democrat-Capital Class Ads Are Workers You Can Afford To Hire! Dia TA 6-1000.

That brought us from planes to everyday life, for every man must make some kind of a jump. How do you leap into military service putting these new disciplines into your planning and thinking? Or jump physical suffering? Or into the loneliness of being cut off from your normal routines? Or jump into the "unknown" of any new experience?

Personally, I always marvel at reading the description of that ancient Hebrew leader, Abraham, of whom it was written, "He went out, not knowing whither he went . . . oft he looked for a city which hath foundations whose builder and maker is God." That's jumping without fear.

Most of us are untrained parachutists. Our society gives us the equipment engineered to avoid jumps, not to make them. We have medicines to avoid pain, securities to evade insecurity, comforts to dodge the uncomfortable. Yet we are surrounded by uncertainty. We soon learn, as Paul Tillich once underscored, that joy is not necessarily freedom from pain. Real joy comes to those who know the meaning of the personal jump yet are also certain of the creative love of God. They're never caught in the all too prevalent despairing cynicism which spits out, "Go ahead and jump. Who cares?"

It's difficult to find the adequate training for these jumps. There's no easy course that can offer you the requisite faith and courage and no routine way of indicating the string to pull. It takes a daily maturing, a slow growing in faith not only as belief but as trust. It is gaining the perspective which Carl Michalson asserts, "The knowledge that God does not intend our sufferng minimizes the agony of this present age to the status of a pregnancy. It's days are numbered. You can stand almost anything if you know it is not going to last forever."

Those two young men were facile in their discussion of parachuting but I am not tempted. Yet there is truth in understanding and reality, and this commercialized world has a way of dodging truth. There is sense in understanding what to do about dangers and this busy world has a way of ignoring the preparation. Sometimes we shall have to jump and it ought to be a leap of faith, trusting the purposes of God for the "now" as well as for the "then." The man who can make his jump unafraid is certain that "Let goods and kindreds go, this mortal life also, the Kingdom our's remaineth."
